

Sara Kim, PhD

Dr. Sara Kim, Research Professor of Surgery, received her PhD in Education from University of Washington in 1999. Currently, she serves as the Director of Educational Innovations and Strategic Programs at the Institute for Simulation and Interprofessional Studies (UW-ISIS), University of Washington and Director of Center for Leadership and Innovation in Medical Education (CLIME). She is the inaugural holder of the George G. B. Bilsten Professorship in the Art of Communication with Peers and Patients. Dr. Kim actively teaches and leads research in conflict management and collaborates with a wide range of stakeholders across UW Medicine to develop an organizational capacity in communication skill training. Dr. Kim has numerous peer-reviewed publications in leading medical education and surgery journals, covering topics of physician communication skills, assessment, teaching and learning practices.